The longest democratic presidential donvention that has been held since the war was that held in New York in 1868. It met on the "th and adjourned on the 9th. Nothing but Governor Seymour's unexpected acceptance of a purely complimentary nomination prevented the nomination of Chief Just to Chase at this convention.

CLEVELAND AND HENDRICKS.

The democrate have made their nominations, and the country has the opportunity it has been waiting for to compare candidates. The dispatches from thickepo indican a decidenty time state of feeling as compacted with this which followed the nomination of Mr. Blains, and our critorial horrespondence tells us that the republicans are more condition than over. There will be time enough between now and it is it true that the dominarate index is a weak one. At the outset we believe it is, and it is not democrate have the believe first, and it is not followed to the purpose of carrying New York, and Cleveland was taken for this way. In the first place, everything was escribled to the purpose of carrying the whose existence is of value to the world.
